Presenting the trainings are Lisa Thompson, National Liaison for the Abolition of Sex Trafficking for The Salvation Army and John Price, FBI Special Agent, Human Trafficking, of Charlotte, NC.

Lisa Thompson has worked in the area of human/sex trafficking since 1998. In 2004, Lisa was named North & South America’s representative to The Salvation Army’s International Anti-Trafficking Task Force, furthering the Army’s partnerships with governmental and non-governmental organizations in outreach, education and victim recovery programs. Lisa is also the founding member and director of the coalition group Initiative Against Sexual Trafficking, which is a partnership of faith-based, human rights, and child advocacy organizations.

SA John Price investigates criminal Civil Rights violations for the Charlotte Division of the FBI in North Carolina, to include those violations related to human trafficking. He has been with the Bureau for over thirteen years and is one of the FBI’s representatives on the North Carolina Human Trafficking Task Force. His past investigative experiences in the FBI include investigating violent crimes and domestic terrorism matters. Prior to joining the FBI, SA Price spent thirteen years in the U.S. Army. He is a native of North Carolina and graduated from Wake Forest University.
